Elisha Osborn and Marianne Ward were handed a letter late last February telling them that their children "are not residents of the Wainscott School District and are, therefore, not entitled to attend the public schools of this District."

On Tuesday, the district decided at a hearing the day before the coming school year that the students are, again, residents of the district.

"They decided to accept the kids in Wainscott School District," said Osborn on Tuesday. "There's actually quite a bit more to it than that. But the end result is that they took as proof of evidence that they are residents of Wainscott."
